

Behaviors and choices you make may result in your being evicted from University housing due to the safety and security risks to our communities or yourself. YOU CAN BE EVICTED FROM THE RESIDENCE HALLS, EVEN FOR A FIRST OFFENSE. Evictable behaviors include but are not limited to:

  - any legal prescription, outside of prescribed instructions, or not prescribed to you
  - marijuana (including medical marijuana)
  - non-prescription or illegal drugs (including synthetic drugs, and/or controlled substances)

*If it is in your room, your pocket or anywhere else under your control, it is considered to be yours.

- Repeated use or possession of alcohol, to include as few as two times
- Possession of large amounts of alcohol, whether you are underage or over 21 years old
- Tampering with fire safety equipment or devices. This includes, but is not limited to: creating fire or fire-like conditions, creating false fire alarms or discharging fire extinguishers.
- Acts of individual violence or domestic violence (as defined in the policies and procedures for hall living).
- Physically hurting or causing injury to yourself or others, sexual assault/misconduct, fighting, pushing/shoving, etc.
- Harassment
- Stalking
- Possession of a weapon.
- Bomb threats

Financial Implications

There are several implications of being evicted. Most obviously, you move out of University housing and find off-campus housing, at your own expense. Perhaps not so obvious, you cannot visit any University residence hall or apartment complex. You are also not permitted to live in any University of Arizona residence hall in the future. And finally, if you are evicted from a Residence for conduct reasons, you will be charged Rent based on the dates of your Occupancy (pro-rated rent), plus you will be charged 65% of the remaining academic year Rent or $2,500, whichever is less.

I have fully read, understand, and acknowledge that it is my responsibility to know and follow the Policies & Procedures for Hall Living, which includes the above-referenced standards and additional expectations for residing in the University of Arizona Residence Halls.
